INTERVIEWS

The Secret of Williamson's Success
by R. L. Dawson

Every time I sit down to write this monthly column, I find that I am pleasantly surprised by the character of the people in sports.

This month I had the chance to interview Bobby Edstrom, who plays for the Meadow College Tigers. Bobby is a football player who stands six feet five inches tall and weighs three hundred pounds. When you see him, you automatically think that if you offended him, he could stomp all over you in two seconds flat.

We sat down in his coach's office to talk. It was the beginning of training in the late days of summer. He was wearing a Tigers T-shirt and jeans. He looked very comfortable and welcoming. Suddenly I didn't feel so nervous anymore. I began by asking him about his background and how he got to be such a good football player. I was amazed at his answer.

You see, I thought Bobby was one of those "natural athletes"—the ones who are stars from their earliest days on the playground. That was not the case with Bobby. He struggled in high school. He almost did not make the team his sophomore year.

When I asked him how he got to where he is today, he said two words: "Coach Williamson." Bobby Edstrom's high school coach, Leonard Williamson, told him that practicing hard, even when you are struggling, can get you to where you want to be. This coach encouraged Bobby every step of the way. He never allowed Bobby to think that he could not achieve his goals. A tear came to Bobby's eye as he talked about his coach. I asked if Bobby had ever had a chance to thank his coach, and he said that he hadn't. Coach Williamson had moved away from town, and Bobby lost contact with him.

Well, Bobby, chances are that Coach Williamson will read this column. I think that you can consider this a sincere, if overdue, thank-you card to an important and inspiring teacher.
